AI in Google Products

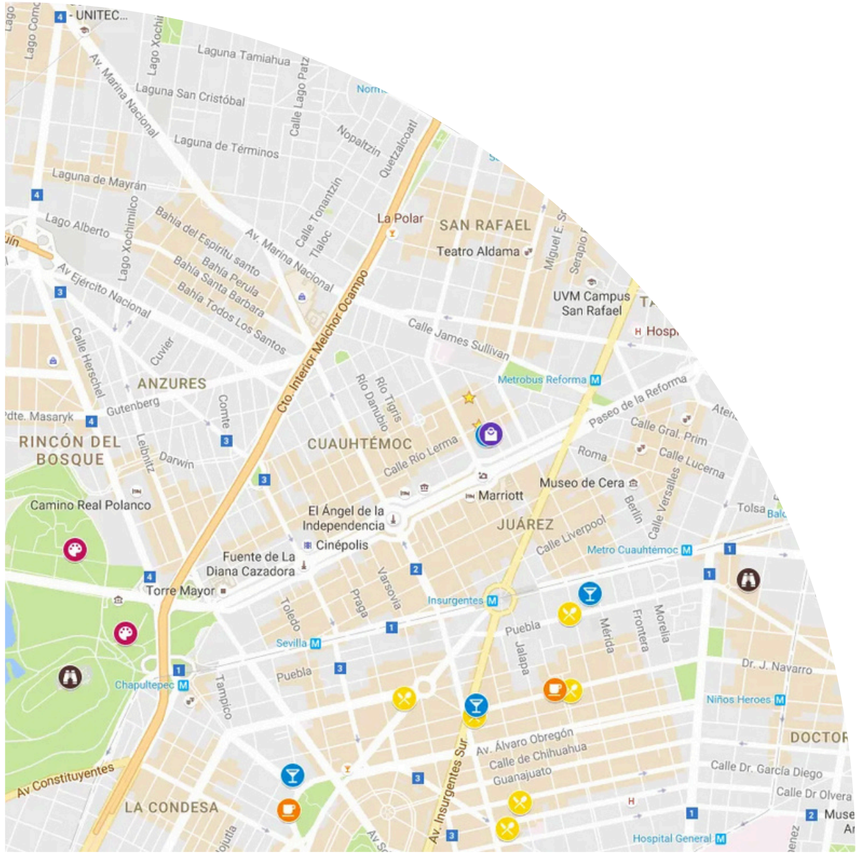

PRESENTED BY SOHAM SEN

AI in Google Search

Google first released Gemini, then called “Bard” in March 2023. Since then, it has implemented it’s AI in multiple aspects of it’s services, including it’s search engine, which provides users with AI Overviews to provide quick answers rather than extensive research.

AI in Google Maps

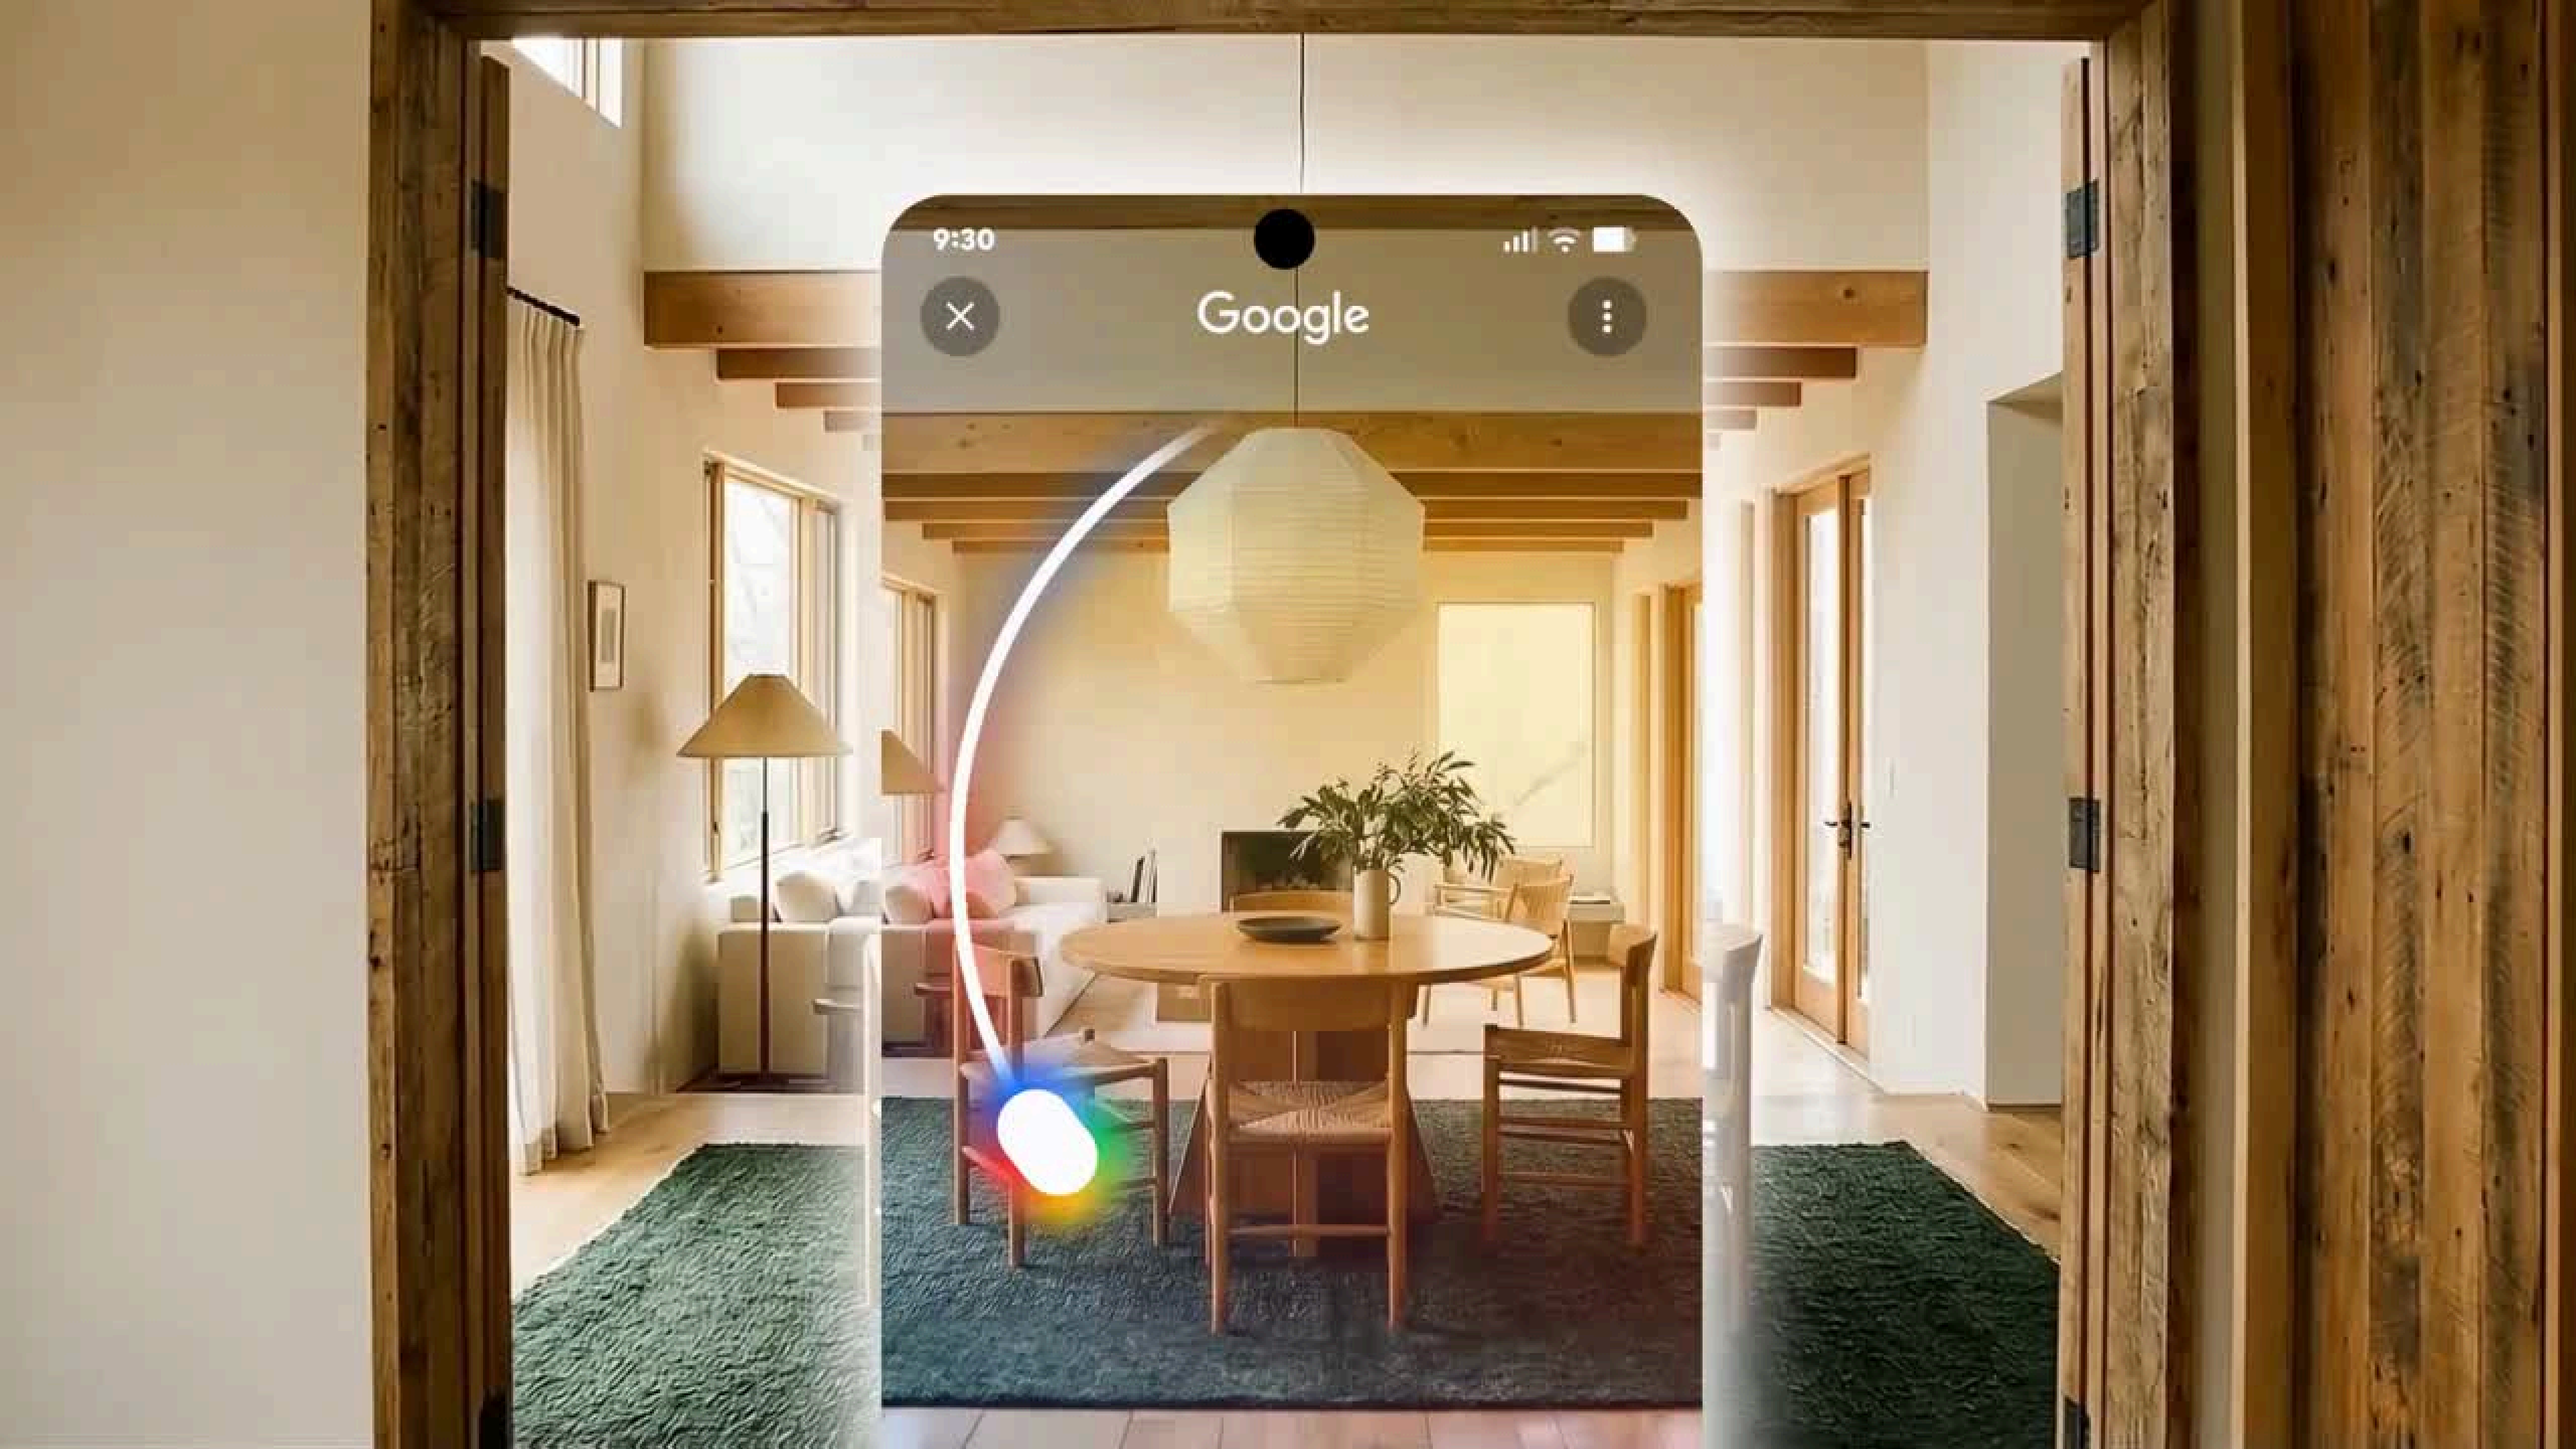

Google has integrated Gemini into Google Maps to enable natural-language searches, allowing users to ask conversational questions and receive personalized recommendations based on Maps data and reviews. It also enhances navigation with AI-powered guidance and trip planning, helping users explore new places and travel more confidently.

AI in Google Lens

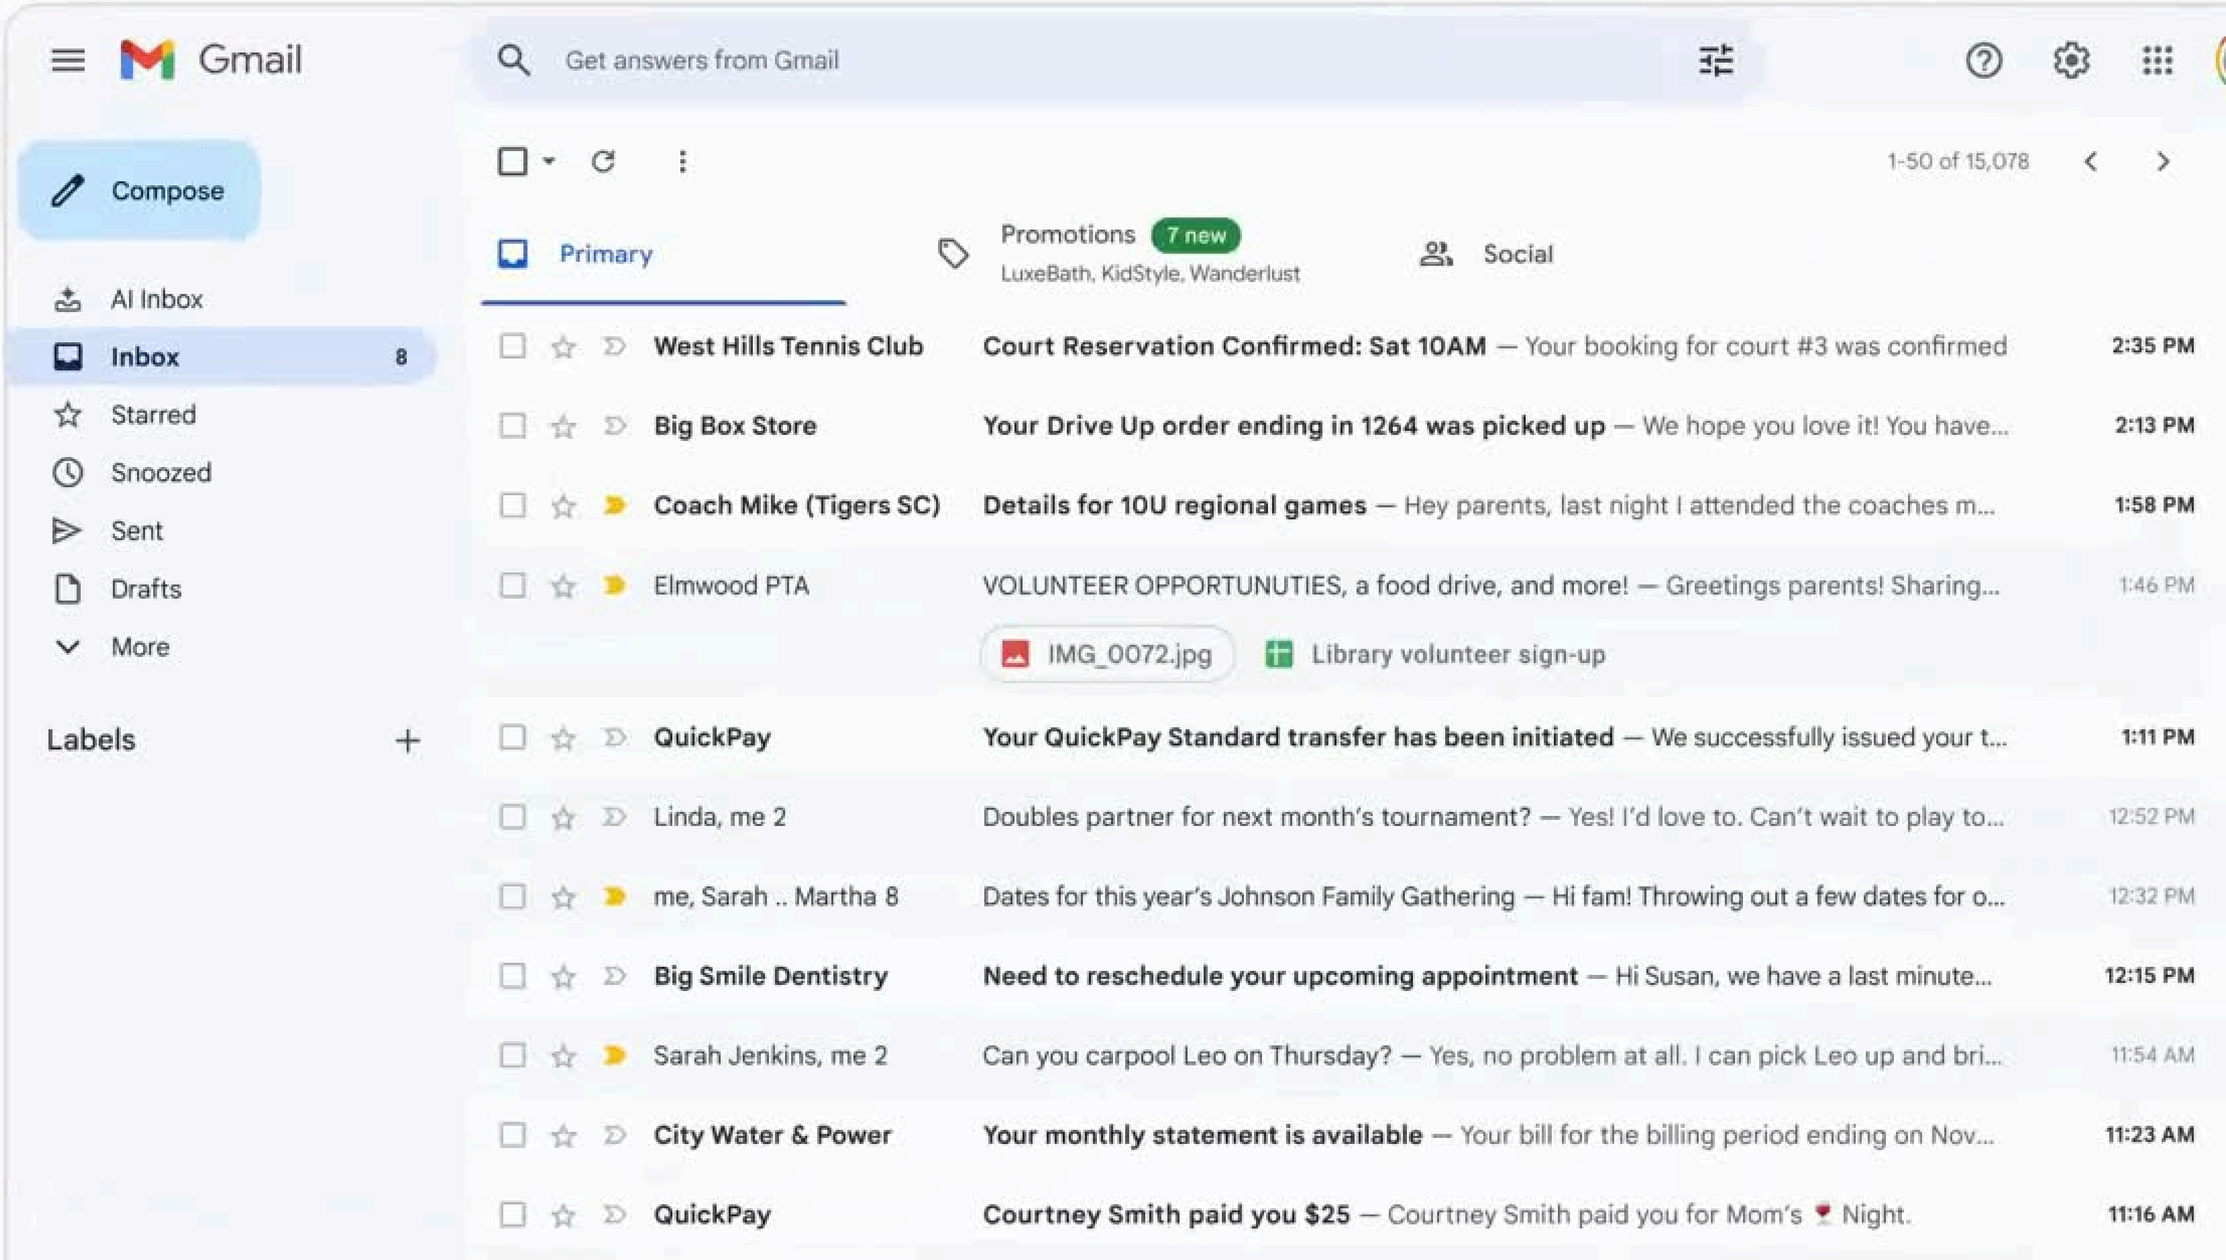

The integration of Gemini with Google Lens enables users to search and learn about the world using both images and natural-language questions. By combining advanced visual recognition with AI reasoning, Gemini provides detailed explanations, identifies multiple objects within a scene, and delivers more accurate, context-aware responses to help users better understand what they see.

AI in Gmail

The integration of Gemini into Gmail enhances email management by using AI to summarize conversations, generate context-aware replies, and quickly retrieve key information from the inbox. This allows users to save time, stay organized, and communicate more efficiently without manually searching through lengthy email threads.

AI in Google Translate

The integration of Gemini with Google Translate enhances translations by providing contextual explanations that help users understand why specific words or phrases are translated in a certain way. This AI-powered feature improves translation accuracy, clarifies nuances across different languages, and enables users to communicate with greater confidence.
